

Preamble

Application of science in everyday life is of paramount importance. Hepatitis Foundation of Tripura in its journey of Twenty years of Health science & Public Health could probably learned best to materialize the concept of Health and biological science in the everyday life of every human being across the globe.

This applied science of medicine and biology needs to be thought globally in a same tune by the people who can utilize them scientifically to change the life and life style of individual, community & Society at large.

The science needs sharing, conceptualizing and delivering the hope to the people. International Journal of Medicine & Biological science (IJMB) has got a mission of delivering science to every individual in need.

The journal is being published in electronic mode to start with but will have its print version later on so as to reach out to more and more people who can give science a international flavour.

The subsequent development will be published gradually
